ATTEMPTS TO TAKE OWN LIFE

Son Discovers Wm. Verrier Lying in Hay Loft With Throat Gashed

HAS CHANCE OF RECOVERY

In a fit of despondency, William Verrier made an attempt to take his own life this (Thursday) morning.

For some little time he had been acting a little queer and had seemed blue and meloncholy, which was just the reverse of his cheerful disposition, but nevertheless, an act of this kind was entirely unlooked for.

He was found by his son about eight o'clock in the morning, lying in a pool of blood in the hay loft of his barn grasping a bloody jack knife tightly in his hand and bleeding profusely from a long gash in his throat, extending from ear to ear.

The news was quickly spread and soon Drs. Warriner, Turner and Beebe were at the home doing their best in an effort to save his life.

The wound was inflicted in such a way that although it was a long gash, yet it failed to sever the juglar vein or the wind pipe.

After the local physicians had done all in their power for him, it was thought advisable to take him to the hospital at Waukegan.

An ambulance was sent for and he was taken to the McAllister hospital in Waukegan.

It is thought that he has a good chance for recovery, providing no complications set in.

No reason for his dispondency or for him wishing to end his life is known.

DEATH CALLS MRS. CECELIA LYNCH OF KOLZE

Mrs. Cecell Lynch aged 44 years, 10 months and 4 days died at her home at Kolze, Ill., last Saturday night, Nov. 4. She was formerly Miss Cecelia Fitzpatrick of Prairie View, Ill. The early part of her life she spent employed as a bookkeeper for a firm in Chicago.

The deceased was born at Prairie View Jan. 1, 1872. Her death was a great surprise to her family and friends who were hoping for her recouery.

She was united marriage to Thomas J. Lynch of Eden, Wis., Sept. 8, 1897. Mr. Lynch being an employe of the Soo Line at that time at Lake Villa they made their home there for several years, from there they moved to Kolze, where he was appointed yard foreman, and there they resided up to her death.

The funeral was held at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday morning from St. Gertrude's church in Franklin Park, with interment in St. Mary's cemetery in Buffalo Grove, I ll. The funeral was one of the largest ever held in Kolze, the cortege made upof 20 autos. The floral offerings were large and beautiful revealing the high esteem which the deceased was held by her friends.

She leaves to mourn her loss her husband one son Raymond, two daughters Viola and Gertrude and two brothers Charles Fitzpatrick of Buffalo Grove, Ill., and William of Montana. Those from away who attended the funeral were: Miss Margaret Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Collins of Fond du Lac, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. John Braun of Eden, Mrs. J. Clark of Lomura, Wis., and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Lynch of Antioch.

A precious one from them has gone
From her home so near the station,
A place is vacant in her home
Which never can be filled.
How cruel was death that night,
Who called their mother away
From this world of sin and sorrow,
To the joys of Heaven, I pray.

Let us try to follow in her faith of friendship and kindness, that we may all be ready to answer the call of the dread destroying angel. And may her loving husband, son and daughters mercifully forget e'er enjoy the sweetest lot.

JOHN HODGE HAS MARVELOUS ESCAPE FROM SERIOUS INJURY

John Hodge, formerly of Antioch but now a resident of Diamond Lake passed through a very harrowing experience last Thursday night, from which he was fortunate enough to escape without serious injury. Mr. Hodge maintains an insurance office over the Citizens Bank at Area, and he was driving from there to his home when his car skidded in the mud and careened over into the ditch at the side of the road Hodge was pinned under the steering wheel in such a manner that he could not extricate himself, try as he would, nor could he budge the car that weighed heavily on his shoulders.

The accident occurred about one-eighth of a mile from his home and he tried shouting to arouse if possible his wife or a neighboring family still nearer. He finally became exhausted and lapsed into unconsciousness, only to be aroused by gasoline trickling from the storage tank into his face. He could not get into a position to avoid the little stream of gasoline and until the supply tank was exhausted he suffered terrible agony from the smarting fluid on his face. He lay with eyes closed for hours occasionally shouting for help.

It was 6 o'clock Friday morning when John Jaeger, a farmer living near Hodge, passed that way and discovered his plight. Assistance was secured and the auto lifted so Jaeger could pull the imprisoned man from beneath it.

Mr. Hodge was so exhausted and weakened from his harrowing experience he had to be carried to his home and physicians summoned. He was bruised about the head and shoulders and his eyes and face swollen from the gasoline.

Miraculously Mr. Hodge suffers no permanent injury and other than being badly unnerved and bruised, he escaped a terrible experience most fortunately. Dr. Taylor, attending physician, says a few weeks' rest and quiet will avail to restore him to his usual health.

Resolutions of Respect.

Resolutions unanimously adopted by the Lake County Milk Producers association:

Whereas, It has pleased Providence to remove by death from our midst our friend and brother, John F. Martin,

Whereas, Mr. Martin was one of the founders of our organization, always a most zealous member and for four years its official treasurer, be it resolved

That we express our sorrow over the loss we have sustained, be it further resolved,

That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our minutes and a copy sent to his widow and also a copy offered to the county press for publication,

Prepared

We may be shy of connon and we may be short of guns,
We may not have as many men as many other ones,
We may require a fort or two, some infantry and horse,
A little more artilery to back them up, of course,
But in one matter we have not a reason to be scared—
For, when it comes to pumpkin pies, we surely are prepared!

We may be short of men of war and shy of submarines
And low in mines and other subterranean machines;
We ought to have an aeroplane, or maybe two or three,
To nest among the mountaintops or hydroplane the sea;
We haven't any instrument for shooting poisoned gas—
But we can beat the universe at making apple sass!

We have the pumpkins and we have the pip pins big and fine;
And if you want preparedness, pie-paredness for mine;
If someone sails across the see America to try,
We'll shoot them full of apple sass and full of pumpkin pie.
I bet they'll throw their guns away, beneath that magic charm,
And settle in America and buy them each a farm!

GOOD ROADS DANCE IS SUCCESS

Big Crowd Joins in Boosting Good Cause as Well as Enjoying Good Tims

$300 IS RAISED FOR CAUSE

When we say that the good roads dance and entertainment at the Queen of West last Friday evening was a grand success, both financially and socialy, it is far from giving it its just deserts for all who participated in the festivities of the occasion pronounced it the banner event of the season. The large attendance was made manifest by the vast number of autos from the different hotels in close proximity, also the countryside was largely represented as well as a goodly number from town.

At about 9 o'clock when the rythemic strains of music furnished by Hanneman's orchestra floated out on the evening breeze the floor in the spacious pavilion was soon filled with those who delight in shaking the fantastic foot in the dizzy ways of the exilerating pass time. The weight of years and tinges of rheumatism was forgotten for the time being. Silvered locks and bald domes mingled with the silken tresses of the younger maidens, all seemingly bent on having a good time. Apparently there was no discriminating, nothing of the high tone or classy order sociability was the main issue and reigned supreme. The evening was perfect and in full harmony to the occasion.

At about twelve o'clock a bountiful lunch was prepared and was one of the principal events of the evening and judging by appearances was relished by all present. The management are deserving great credit for their combined efforts in making the occasion a success in every particular, not only for the courtesies shown the patrons in a social way, but for the very liberal amount received to be expended in improving the highway between Grass Lake and Antioch, and we have every reason to believe it will be used judiciously and with economy, and that the example may be emulated by other localities where the taxes are not sufficient to meet the requirements for good roads. There were many present who made the assertion that if their wishes could be gratified the event would be duplicated in the near future, not only for the e joyment it afforded, but the benefit derived in procuring funds to be expended in the much needed improvements for the public highway.

One Who Was There

M. BURKE RECOVERS STOLEN PROPERTY IN CHICAGO

M. M. Burke is considering himself a lucky chap these days, and the reason is that he has recoved his horse, buggy, harness and robes which was stolen from his barn last week, at a total expense of less than ten dollars.

On Friday last, after he had given up all hope of ever seeing the outfit again, he received a postal card telling him to go to a certain barn on Wells street, Chicago, and the he would find his property, this was signed "A Friend".

Saturday morning Mr. Burke and constable Huber went to the city and sure enough the stolen outfit was located just as the card had stated.

Upon inquiry it was found that a young man had placed it there and had tried hard to sell it but all who came to look at the horse had considered it too light, and it was thought that when the fellow found it was not easy to dispose of the outfit he took this means of returning it to the owner.

Tuesday Mr Burke again went to the city, paid the charges of keeping, which was a little over five dollars, and drove the horse home.

ANTIOCH ISTOHAVE VILLAGE HALL

Eighty-five Voters Were In Favor of it While Forty-eight Were Not

WORK WILL BE RUSHED

When the voters, for and against the proposition of erecting a new village hall, were counted last Thursday evening, it was found that the proposition had carried by a vote of 85 to 48.

No one seemed particularly interested and the vote cast was very light. Of the ninety-six men who voted fifty-eight were in favor of the village erecting a hall and thirty-eight were not.

Thirty seven women cast ballots, twenty-seven voted for the cause and ten against it.

The members of the board are acting as fast as they can in accordance with the law and are in hopes of rushing the building to a speedy completion. The plans have already been drawn and are, at the present time on file in the office of the Village Clerk.

The building which is to be of brick will be a one story structure 22 feet in width and 60 feet in length.

The front room 22x36 will be given over to the use of the fire department, while the room in the rear will be for the use of the village board, this room will be 22x24.

A basement will be done off under this room and there the cells and also a room for the housing of vagrants will be located.

The entire building will be heated by a furnace, and lighted by electricity and water will be piped into the rooms. Altogether it will be a modern building, suitable in every way for the purpose for which it is intended and above all else it will furnish a permanent place for the fireman and the village board.

In view of the fact that the board is now forced to hold their meetings at the pump house, which is very crowded and poorly heated, we extend to them the same invitation that we extended to the firemen some time ago. We invite them to hold their meetings from the present time until the new building is completed at the News office. We offer them, free of charge, the use of such conveniences as this office may afford. The key of the office has been placed in the hands of one of the board members who will open it whenever a meeting is to be held, and if the board sees fit to accept this offer they will be independent in the way of coming and going as they please.

Open Bridge Bids

Bids for the construction of bridges over the drainage ditch in the town of Bristol were opened at the office of the county clerk on Thursday afternoon and the cost of three bridges will be in the neighborhood of $6,000. Two of the bridges will be built by the Schoonmaker and Wending company of Milwaukee These include the Pomeranko bridge at a cost of $1,993.20 and the Doan bridge at a cost of $2,105.12. The State Line bridge is to be built by the Kieran company of Whitewater at a cost of $2,100. It is expected that work on the bridge will be started soon in order that they may be completed before the winter weather sets in. Three bids were received for the bridges and in each case the contract was awarded to the lowest bidder.

STEPS IN FRONT OF TRAIN

Stepping from one train into the path of another, John Smith, aged 35 years, was struck and it is believed fatallv injured, at the Warrenton station of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad about 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. He was rushed to the Lake county general hospital in Waukegan where he is lying in a critical condition.

He wa injured about the head and it is feared that he sustained a fracture of the skull.

Smith alighted from the southbound train which arrives at Warrenton at about 5 o'clock. The milk train due there at the same hour pulled into the station and Smith, unaware of its approach, stepped directly into its path. He was struck and thrown off the tracks, where he lay unconscious.

The station agent and others rushed to his assistance and a phone call was sent in from the residence of H., Doolittle at Warrenton to the firm of Conrad & Wetzel and the big motor ambulance was dispatched to the scene of the accident. While being placed in the ambulance Smith regained consciousness for a time and then relapsed into a state of coma.

He was rushed to the general hospital where an examination was made of his wounds.

Smith was reared at Wheeling, in this county, there his parents still reside. He has been employed for more than a year at the Wilson farm on the telegraph road and is known as an industrious and energetic man.

This is the first accident of its kind that has occurred at Warrenton for many years. A clear vision of the tracks can be gained at that place, but the closeness of the two tracks makes the possibility of the accident very great.

ALL TROOPS WILL BE MUSTERED OUT AT FORT SHERIDAN

Fort Sheridan took on added importance, when word was received here that in future the troopers who are discharged from service on the border will be sent to the local post to be mustered out instead of being returned to their respective state mobilization camps. This action will be taken by virtue of a new order issued by war department. From Fort Sheridan the men will be furnished transportation home.

Economy is said to have actuated the war department in taking this step. The authorities considered it far more expensive to maintain the camps in the different states for the mustering out of the men when one camp will be sufficient.

It has been figured that it is much cheaper to pay the railroad fare home of these men than to maintain them indefinitely in the several state camps.

The First Illinois Cavalry will be mustered out next Saturday, after marching from Fort Sheridan to Chicago and parading through the loop district in the latter citp.

Members of D troop of Springfield, and B troop of Urbana, are expected to leave for their respective homes the same afternoon. Under the terms of the new Hay-Chamberlain bill, each troop will retain 32 of the horses it acquired in the federal service.

When these troops have left Fort Sheridan the reservation wil be practically deserted until the arrival from time to time of troops from Texas. These additional troops will be mustered out as fast as possible.

An Old Sayin' of Mother's

The older that a body gits
The better, seems t' me,
He reckolects the folks an' jokes
An' things that used t' be;
Like other night, whilst settin' there
An' rompin' through the years,
An' driftin' on the back'urds way,
I swan, I heerd my mother say;
"Go wash yer neck an' ears!"

It took me back for forty years,
And I's a boy again,
With same dislike fer water that
Was natural to me then;
I seemed t' feel my speerit rise,
An' feel my boyish tears
A-rollin' down in same ol' way,
Like when my mother used t' say:
"Go wash yer neck an' ears!"

Clean neck an' ears, you reckolect,
Was purt' nigh disgrace—
There wa'nt no sense in washin' 'cept
Perhaps a body's face!
We used t' think that ma's was made
To add to boyish keers,
An' stand around in bossin' way,
When boys was tiredest, an' say;
"Go wash yer neck an' ears!"

An' yit I'll warrant that tonight
You'd like t' go to bed
In same ol' room, with locust bloom
A-droppin' over head
On shingle room, an' hold yer breath
With all your boyish fears,
An' hear yer mother softly creep
Upstairs an' ask y': "Gone to sleep?"
Did y' wash yer neck an' ears?

EMINENT surgeons tell Hugh Whitaker that six months is his life limit. Peter Stark, intimate friend, finds him stunned by the news and arranges to take Whitaker on a long South sea yacht trip. The sick man sneaks off to a country hotel, intending to kill himself, but surprises a young girl in the act of drinking poison. She is Mary Ladislas, love-starved daughter of a New York plutocrat, deserted by the man with whom she planned clandestine marriage. To save her good name, Whitaker marries the girl (knowing that six months is his limit), gives her money and puts her on a train for home. He runs plump into Stark, hunting him. Months later, the yacht burns at sea. All hands die but Whitaker, who is reported lost. A delicate operation restores his health, and after five prosperous years in Australia, he returns to New York—one back from the dead! We find him—in this installment—talking with his old law partner, Drummond, about the prospects of finding that little girl wife. A beautiful actress enters the story.

"Would you know her if you saw her?"

"I don't know." Whitaker frowned with annoyance. "She's six years older—"

"Well, but what was she like?" Drummond pursued curiously.

Whitaker shook his head. "It's not easy to remember. Matter of fact, I don't believe I ever got one good square look at her. It was twilight in the hotel, when I found her; we sat talking in absolute darkness, toward the end; even in the minister's study there was only a green-shaded lamp on the table; and on the train—well, we were both too much worked up, I fancy, to pay much attention to details."

"Blonde or brune?"

"I swear I don't know. She wore one of those funny knitted caps, tight down over her hair, all the time."

Drummond laughed quietly.

"I don't feel in a joking humor," Whitaker said roughly. "It's a serious matter and wants serious treatment . . . What else have we got to mull over?"

Drummond shrugged suavely. "There's enough to keep us busy for several hours," he said. "For instance, there's my stewardship."

"Your which?"

"My care of your property. You left a good deal of money and securities lying round loose, you know; naturally I felt obliged to look after 'em. There was no telling when Widow Whitaker might walk in and demand an accounting. I presume we might as well run over the account—though it is getting late."

"Half-past four," Whitaker informed him, consulting his watch. "Take too long for to-day. Some other time."

Drummond's reply was postponed by the office boy, who popped in on the heels of a light knock.

"Mr. Max's outside," he announced.

"O the deuce!" The exclamation seemed to escape Drummond's lips involuntarily. He tightened them angrily, as though regretting the lapse of self-control, and glanced hurriedly askance to see if Whitaker had noticed. "I'm busy," he added, a trace sullenly. "Tell him I've gone out."

"But he's got 'nappointment," the boy protested. "And besides, I told him you was in."

"You needn't fob him off on my account," Whitaker interposed. "We can finish our confab later—Monday—any time. It's time for me to be getting up-town, anyway."

"It isn't that," Drummond explained doggedly. "Only—the man's a bore, and—"

"It isn't Jules Max?" Whitaker excitedly. "Not little Jules Max, who used to stage manage our amateur shows?"

"That's the man," Drummond admitted with plain reluctance.

"Then have him in, by all means. I want to say howdy to him, if nothing more. And then I'll clear out and leave you to his troubles."

Drummond laughed a trifle sourly. "Max has developed into a heavyweight entrepreneur, you know."

"Meaning theatrical manager? Then why not say so? But I might've guessed he'd drift into something of the sort."

A moment later Whitaker was vigorously pumping the unresisting—indeed the apparently boneless—hand of Jules Max. The hat that had made Hammerstein famous Max had appropriated—straight crown, flat brim and immaculate gloss—bodily. Beneath it his face was small of feature, and fat. A pince-nez sheltered his near-sighted eyes. His short, round little body was invariably by day dressed in a dark gray morning-coat, white-edged waistcoat, assertively-striped trousers, and patent-leather shoes with white spats. He had a passion for lemon-colored gloves of thinnest kid and slender malacca walking-sticks. His dignity was an awful thing, as ingrained as his strut.

He reasserted the dignity now with a jerk of his maltreated hand, readjusted his glasses, and resumed his stare.

"Either," he observed, "you're Hugh Whitaker come to life or a deuced outrage."

"Both if you like."

"You sound like both," complained the little man. "Anyway, you were drowned in the Philippines or somewhere long ago, and I never waste time on a dead one. . . . Drummond—" He turned to the lawyer with a vastly business-like air.

"No, you don't!" Whitaker insisted, putting himself between the two men. "I admit that you're a great man; you might at least admit that I'm a live one."

A mollified smile moderated the small man's manner. "That's a bargain," he said, extending a pale yellow paw; "I'm glad to see you again, Hugh. When did you recrudesce?"

"An hour ago," Drummond answered for him; "blew in here as large as life and twice as important. He's been running a gold farm out in New Guinea. What do you know about that?"

"It's very interesting," Max conceded. "You've asked him, of course?" he demanded of Drummond, nodding toward Whitaker.

Drummond flushed slightly. "No chance," he said. "I was on the point of doing it when you butted in."

"What's this?" inquired Whitaker.

Max delivered himself of a startling bit of information: "He's going to get married."

Whitaker stared. "Drummond? Not really?"

Drummond acknowledged his guilt brazenly: "Next week, in fact."

"But why didn't you say anything about it?"

"You didn't give me an opening. Besides, to welcome a deserter from the great beyond is enough to drive all other thoughts from a man's mind."

"There's to be a supper in honor of the circumstances, at the Beaux Arts tonight," supplemented Max. "You'll come, of course."

"I'll be there—and furthermore, I'll be waiting at the church a week hence—or whenever it's to come off. And now I want to congratulate you." Whitaker held Drummond's hand in one of those long, hard grips that mean much between men. "But mostly I want to congratulate her. Who is she?"

"Sara Law," said Drummond, with pride in his quick color and the lift of his chin.

"The greatest living actress on the English-speaking stage," Max announced, preening himself importantly. "My own discovery."

"Of course I've heard—but I have been out of touch with such things," Whitaker apologized. "When shall I see her?"

"In honor of her retirement," Max answered, fussing with a gardenia on his lapel. "She retires from the stage finally, and forever—she says—when the curtain falls tonight."

"Then I've got to be in the theater tonight—if that's the case," said Whitaker.

"'Fraid you won't get in, though," Drummond doubted darkly. "Everything in the house for this final week was sold out a month ago. Even the speculators are cleaned out."

"Tut!" the manager reproved him loftily. "Hugh is going to see Sara Law act for the last time from my personal box—aren't you, Hugh?"

"You bet I am!" Whitaker asserted with conviction.

"Then come along." Max caught him by the arm and started for the door. "So long, Drummond . . ."

CHAPTER V.

Curtain.

Nothing would satisfy Max but that Whitaker should dine with him. He consented to drop him at the Ritz-Carlton, in order that he might dress, only on the condition that Whitaker would meet him at seven, in the white room at the Knickerbocker.

"Just mention my name to the head waiter," he said with magnificence; "or if I'm there first, you can't help seeing me. Everybody knows my table—the little one in the southeast corner. . . . Shoot, James!"

The latter phrase was Max's way of ordering the driver to move on. The car snorted resentfully, then pulled smoothly and swiftly away. Max waved a jaunty farewell with a lemon-colored hand, over the back of the tonneau.

Whitaker went up to his room in a reflective mood in which the theatrical man had little place. Since his arrival in New York he had fallen into the habit of seeking the view from his window when in meditative humor. A view of ten thousand roofs, inexpressibly enchanting. . . . Somewhere—perhaps—in that welter of steel and stone, as eternal and as restless as the sea, was the woman Whitaker had married, working out her lonely destiny. A haphazard biscuit tossed from his window might fall upon the very roof that sheltered her; he might search for a hundred years and never cross her path.

He wondered. . . .

The possibility that she might have married a second time did not disturb his pulse by the least fraction of a beat. He even contemplated the chance that she might be dead with normal equanimity. Fortunate, that he didn't love her. More fortunate still, that he loved no one else.

Incontinently he wrote and dispatched a long, extravagant cablegram to Mrs. Pettit in care of the American embassy, little doubting that she would immediately answer.

* * * * * * *

When eventually he strode into the white room, Max was already established at the famous little table in the southeast corner. Whitaker was conscious of turning heads and guarded comment as he took his place opposite the little fat man.

"Make you famous in a night," Max assured him importantly. "Don't happen to need any notoriety, do you?"

"No, thanks."

"Dine with me here three nights hand-running and they'll let you into the Syndicate by the back door without even asking your name. P. T. A's one grand little motto, my boy."

"P. T. A.?"

"Pays to advertise. Paste that in your hat. Look me over," he requested abruptly, leaning back. "I guess I'm some giddy young buck, what?"

Whitaker reviewed the striking effect Max had created by encasing his brief neck and double chin in an old-fashioned high collar and black silk stock, beneath which his important chest was protected by an elaborately frilled shirt decorated with black pearl studs. His waist was strapped in by a pique waistcoat edged with black, and there was a distinctly perceptible "invisible" stripe in the material of his evening coat and trousers.

"He's Going to Get Married."

"Dressed like a fool," Max summed up the ensemble before his guest could speak. "Would you believe that despair could gnaw at the vitals of anyone as wonderfully arrayed?"

"I would not," Whitaker asserted.

"Yet, I'm down in the mouth, because this is Sara's last appearance." Max motioned the waiter to remove the debris of a course. "I've got it in my knob that she's my mascot. If she leaves me, my luck goes with her. I made her, all right, but she made me, too; and it sprains my sense of good business to break up a paying combination like that."

"Nonsense," Whitaker contended warmly. "If I'm not mistaken, you were telling me this afternoon that you stand next to Belasco as a producing manager. The loss of one star isn't going to rob you of that prestige, is it?"

"You never can tell," the little man contended darkly; "I wouldn't bet thirty cents my next production would turn out a hit. I've had several close calls with Sara—she's threatened to chuck the stage often before this; but every time something happened to make her change her mind. I've got a hunch maybe something will happen this time, too. If it does, I won't want any partners."

How much information do you wager that Max is in a position to give Whitaker if he were of a mind to do so?

The HOME BEAUTIFUL

Flowers and Shrubbery—Their Care and Cultivation

Orchids.

THE PEONY AND ITS CULTURE

By C. BESTCHER.

Few people know the wealth of beauty and perfume of the peony. Quite everyone knows the brilliant old red peony or "piny" of the old-time garden. But from that to the modern peony is a great evolution. The modern peony is superior in size, perfume and finish to the chrysanthemum, with less care and more certain results for labor expended.

The requirements of the peony are simple, yet at a few periods they are very easily damaged. We have large areas to handle and cannot give them the same care one could give a few plants.

We give the soil a thorough dressing of fresh manure early in the fall and sow to rye. In April we plow the ground deeply and plant potatoes, corn or other crops that will have good culture.

We prefer to plant any time during September, but planting may be done at any time (if well watered for a few days) from September 1 to May. We do not approve of lifting plants in the spring after they have begun already to make a rapid and tender growth.

Plants that are kept dormant by being dug in the fall may be planted until June with fine success. We have planted big clumps when in full bloom and they grew well, but we do not advise it except when absolutely necessary.

When planting peonies in clayey ground, they should be set about four inches deep, but in light, sandy or loamy soil, five or six inches deep. Old clumps I plant a bit deeper, leaving the crown covered lightly until late when more soil is drawn over them to make the surface level.

Never use much manure the first year on newly planted peonies and care should always be exercised not to overmanure them. The best way is to cultivate them about three inches deep, then apply about one inch of any manure, working the ground several times before winter sets in, or they may be manured after the ground freezes and the manure worked into the soil in the spring.

Keep all the weeds out of the peonies and do not dig over three inches deep from October until the buds are as large as acorns. Many persons have complained about their peonies not blooming, and upon investigation and from observations from my own experience I found that whenever we dug deeply around plants at the time above stated the plants either came up blind or bore a very small percentage of good blooms, so we learned to employ shallow cultivation.

Plant peonies in the bright sunshine away from trees that are liable to shade them or whose roots may sap the plant food in the soil where they are planted.

In lawns where peonies are planted they should be kept well cultivated to a radius of about two feet. Watering is unnecessary except in severe dry weather. Never plant peonies where the crowns are likely to be covered with water longer than a very short time. Peonies under water for several days are likely to be very quickly spoiled.

Peonies are grown from a division of old plants and also from seed. From seed they require from five to eight years to come into full bloom. The following is a short list of very choice sorts:

Officinalis tenuifolia, very early crimson; officinalis rubra, old early red; La France, La France rose color; festiva maximi, paper white, center petals edged crimson; delachei, deep dark crimson; M. DuPont, late white, shows yellow stamens; Felix Drousse, fine late red; D. de Nemours, pure white; P. Duchartre, salmon-pink, very extra; M. M. Chausae, nearly black, very exceptional; Jenny Lind, fine salmon-pink; Grandiflora, grand violet salmon-pink; Dorchester, grand soft pink; Marie Stuart, creamy white, extra; Edulis Supera, early pink.

GROW YOUR ROSES FROM CUTTINGS

A good way to increase your stock of roses is from cuttings. Select a branch of half-hardened wood from a thrifty bush; cut into four or five-inch pieces; see that each of these has several eyes from which growth can start; trim off the leaves except a few near the top of the cutting.

Keep the cuttings in a glass of water for a couple of days.

Select a sunny place in the garden, which has excellent soil. Dig it up well and put in the slips about half their length. Press the soil tightly about the cuttings, water well, and cover with a glass jar or a large tumbler. Keep the ground moist by pouring water around the glass without lifting it up.

Growth should show through the glass in a few weeks, when the plants may be gradually accustomed to the air. Cuttings can be taken as late as mid-October, put down in this way and when cold weather comes just heap the earth high over them, glasses and all. In the spring you will find that more than half have survived.

COUNTESS LEADS A DOUBLE LIFE

French Woman Preys on Londoners to Aid Her Prussian Husband.

HAS AMAZING CAREER

Had Access to Finest Hotels and Was Regarded as Wealthy Woman of Fashion—Now in Internment Camp.

London.—An amazing career of double living has just closed here by the consigning of Mrs. Josephine Bauer, otherwise Comtesse de Bourrienne, to an internment camp until the end of the war. She was regarded as one of the smartest women in London. She was to be met at the Carlton, the Savoy, the Ritz and other fashionable hotel resorts, generally at the writing desk or taking an afternoon tea. Her arrest several days ago as a plain thief caused a loud protest among friends who had learned to admire the lonely woman, but her attic home was found crammed full of pillows, gems, clocks and other valuables. In addition scores of pawn tickets were unearthed.

Charmed Everyone.

Women as well as men were attracted to the countess and charmed by her exquisite taste in dress. Frequently they "made" conversation with her just to learn where she obtained her wonderful garments and "sweet" hats. She posed as a Red Cross worker and stated that her husband was in the war. During all this time she was living in a miserable attic and paying a rental of $1.50 a week, and even that small rental was in arrears.

In London everybody took it for granted that the countess enjoyed a most liberal allowance. The facts came to light only through the disturbing incident of a secret bell placed in the corner of the Hotel Victoria by a house detective for an entirely different purpose. It rang quite suddenly one evening and quite unexpectedly. When the manager reached the spot he found the countess with a valuable vase in her handbag. Then the truth came out.

Helps Her Husband.

It appears that the countess was born in France and was a descendant of Louis de Bourrienne, friend and biographer of Napoleon. She fell in love with a Prussian and married him against the wishes of her father, and her allowance was cut off. When the war broke out the Prussian was placed in an internment camp and his business in London was ruined. His faithful wife, however, sought to support herself by thieving, and for two years succeeded. In addition to making her own way, she sent many gifts and even luxuries to her husband, on the Isle of Man.

The countess, who is thirty-four years of age, is dark and petite and evidently has a deep infatuation for her husband, for she has refused to implicate him in any way in her career in London.

GRIEVING DOG KILLS SELF

"Foxy" Takes Plunge Out of Chicago Hotel After Master Leaves.

Chicago.—One of the rare instances of canine affection came to proof after George W. Lowery of San Francisco had taken leave of his fox terrier, "Foxy," which has been kept in the kennels of the Hotel Morrison on the twenty-first floor. When Mr. Lowery was about to leave the hotel to take a train for New York the body of the dog was found on the pavement. It had leaped from the top floor.

Thieves Return for $175.

West Hempstead, N. Y.—Thieves took $10 from Henry Van Dohlen's home a week ago. Van Dohlen gleefully told a reporter of the thieves overlooking $175. The story was printed and last night the thieves came back and got the $175.

Diet for the Lean.

Dr. Louis Henry Levy, in Pictorial Review says:

"Though the lean individual may be the more agile and vigorous, leanness is also associated with those of a nervous temperament. It is not always a desirable condition, since it prematurely ages the face by the early appearance of wrinkles. It is also the accompaniment of chronically diseased stomachs, resulting from a disturbed digestion and poor absorption of the digested foods.

"The foods which are best adapted for the lean are those that have been denied to the obese person—the starches, sugars, and fats, but sufficient care must be exercised to prevent disturbing an entirely good stomach. Let the lean one eat well of the rich foods and sever relations with the sour and spicy ones. Above all, let her cultivate a sunny, restful disposition, with a nervous system under steady control, for these are the trademarks of the robust and plump person."

Useful Playmates.

"I hope you are selecting playmates whose companionship will be of value to you," said Jimmy's mother.

"Oh, sure," replied Jimmy; "Skinny Jones is teaching me how to black eyes, and Tug Higgins says, if I'll give him my roller skates, he'll teach me the punch that knocked out Bombardier Wells."—Pearson's Weekly.

"There's a Reason"

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Files In Library of Congress Well Patronized

WASHINGTON.—The newspaper and periodical division of the Library of Congress is becoming a more important department of that institution every year, according to William A. Slade, chief of the division. There is nothing under the sun in the way of facts or figures that people do not come there for, and they generally find what they want. Newspaper files dating back 50 or 75 years can be produced in a minute or two, and the history of those periods can be studied with greater detail than is afforded in any other conceivable kind of literary production.

Mr. Slade says that he has 26 miles of bound newspapers on file. Newspapers subscribed to at the present time number 965, of which 849 are American, and the other 116 foreign. The total number of periodicals whose issues come into the library is now 8,184, as compared to 7,842 just a year ago, which shows the rapid increase in the work of this department. Only those are taken which it is thought will be of value to the public.

Collections of old newspaper files are constantly being acquired by the periodical division, and the librarian's report last year referred to the great volume of files there now as "forming a collection of material which is notably rich and in ensemble nowhere else to be duplicated, constantly used by students and investigators."

But the historical value that appeals to students and investigators is not the only value of the literature of this division. Fashion periodicals have to be bound in double strength leather to preserve them from the feverish fingers of the fashion seekers. Also the Sunday editions of the newspapers, containing the "funny" sections, show much wear and tear from the grimy fingers of youngsters.

The division has recently acquired some old files of papers published in the South during the Civil war, notable among them being the Chattanooga Daily Rebel.

Washington Cop Twice Arrests Chief's Father

"BOB" BARBEE, a policeman attached to the First precinct, has made a mighty blow at the record of the world's bravest "cop." Barbee has twice arrested the father of Major Pullman, his chief, within a few weeks.

In a short time Major Pullman will draw up the list of policemen in his department whose record entitles them to promotion, and Barbee has put some finishing touches on his own record which will make it difficult to overlook him.

Regulations are regulations, according to Barbee, and when he found that Peter R. Pullman, father of the local police head, had parked his automobile in a tabooed location, Barbee calmly took Father Pullman's number and took the case to court. Pullman paid $2 and let it go at that.

A short time later, the elder Pullman drove his car into the same restricted part of the street, and again Barbee got him. It happened each time in front of Mr. Pullman's office in G street, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets northwest.

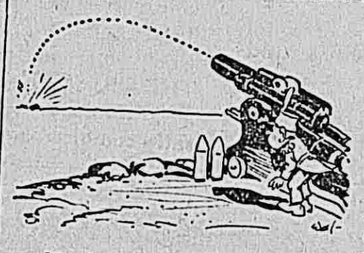

The first time Barbee arrested his chief's father, the policeman had no idea of the elder Pullman's identity beyond his name, and three days elapsed before someone told him what he had done. The second time Barbee caught Mr. Pullman, however, the latter's identity was no secret at all, but Barbee didn't flinch.

So that's how Barbee came to be a high bidder for the title of the world's bravest "cop," and he did it without chasing a burglar, although Barbee's record shows him a first-class burglar chaser, too.

Barbee has a record that is envied by many of his friends in the police department. He has acquired it by conscientious and efficient service combined with the quality known as "nerve." He has a long list of "good cases" to his credit, meaning that he has recovered much stolen property and caught numerous violators of the law.

Some New Inventions for Uncle Sam's Fighters

HOWARD GAU, a twenty-two-year-old inventor, of Cincinnati, has come to Washington to offer to the war department a powderless gun projectile. He says the new weapon eliminates the detonation and smoke which make guns easily discoverable by aeroplanes in the European war.

He explains that compressed air is used to discharge the projectiles, which will have a greater range and penetrating power than any present powder-driven shell. Twenty to thirty miles is the estimated range. Discharge will be caused by the combined use of liquid air and timers. The shell will be constructed in 8, 10, 12 and 14 inch sizes and they will be somewhat similar to shells now in use.

Mr. Gau is the son of Dr. H. F. Gau of Cincinnati. He is a graduate of the Ohio Mechanics' Institute of Cincinnati.

A motorless monoplane capable of reaching a height of 12 miles, out of range of gunfire, is the invention that A. V. Wilson of Bar Harbor, Me., intends to place before the national board of aviation.

Wilson's aeroplane has been patented and he has been working for the last five years to solve the problem of keeping the aviator alive at that height and at a temperature of 120 to 210 degrees below zero. The desired warmth, he says, can be obtained by a solution of one pound of lime and eight ounces of water. This warmth will prevent a hydrogen tank from freezing, he says, and therefore will provide the necessary air for the aviator.

The principle of Wilson's plan is to counteract gravity by turning the planes. On calm days, he admits, the plane would have to be shot into the air with a catapult. Once in flight, however, he claims that he can stay in the air indefinitely.

Postmaster Chance Helps Two Lady Motorists

MERRITT CHANCE, the well-known and eminent postmaster of Washington, was out on a country road during one of the hottest days we ever had since time began. He was driving an automobile, and there in the road in front of him was another machine stuck tight. It wouldn't budge. It seemed to have that stolid, squatty, immovable attitude of Plymouth Rock, and in strong contrast to the silent immovability of the machine was the fluttering manner of the two ladies who were the sole passengers.

"May I help you?" suggested Mr. Chance, and the two ladies were only too glad.

Whereupon the well-known and eminent postmaster shed his coat and began to crank that machine as if he were endeavoring to start an earthquake. He cranked and cranked and cranked, with the thermometer at 108 in the shade, and mighty little shade at that. He spun the motor and spun the motor, until his head spun with it and the perspiration made little pools at his heels. His arms ached; his head ached; his shoulders ached; his back ached, and he was about to die and end all his troubles right there when one of the two ladies said in a sweet voice:

"Wait a minute. Suppose I try the self-starter."

Mr. Chance staggered from in front of the machine, and the lady touched her dainty foot to the self-starter button. There was a grinding noise and then that blessed whirring which means the engine is going.

"Oh, we never thought of that," said the other lady. And as Merritt Chance passed away into a trance the two bright things motored onward.

Drinking of Water

(BY V. M. PIERCE, M. D.)

The general conclusions of the latest Medical Scientists proves that drinking plenty of pure water both between meals and with one's meals is beneficial to health. It has now been proven by means of the X-rays and actual tests upon many healthy young men that the drinking of large amounts of water with meals is often beneficial. Therefore if you want to keep healthy drink plenty of pure water (not ice water), both with your meals and between meals. If you ever suffer from backache, lumbago, rheumatism, or any of the symptoms of kidney trouble—such as deep colored urine, sediment in urine, getting out of bed at night frequently and other troublesome effects, take a little Anuric before meals. These Anuric Tablets can be obtained at almost any drug store.

Prizes Awarded to Western Canada for Wheat, Oats, Barley, Alfalfa and Grasses

The winnings of Western Canada at the Soil Products Exposition at Denver were easily made. The list comprised Wheat, Oats, Barley and Grasses, the most important being the prizes for Wheat and Oats and sweep stake on Alfalfa.

No less important than the splendid quality of Western Canada's wheat and other grains, is the excellence of the cattle fed and fattened on the grasses of that country. A recent shipment of cattle to Chicago topped the market in that city for quality and price.

Western Canada produced in 1915 one-third as much wheat as all of the United States, or over 300,000,000 bushels.

Canada in proportion to population has a greater exportable surplus of wheat this year than any country in the world, and at present prices you can figure out the revenue for the producer. MOST POPULAR BREED

Size Is Quality That Recommends the Light Brahma.

Has No Superior Where Large and Slow Maturing Fowls Are Desired—Barred Where Egg Production Is Chief Item.

(By PROF. H L. KEMPSTER, Missouri College of Agriculture.)

The Light Brahma is the oldest and perhaps the best-known and most popular of the feather-legged chickens. Size is the quality that recommends the Light Brahma. Where large and slowly maturing fowls are desired, the Light Brahma has no superior, but the slowness of maturity is very objectionable in the pullets, which, together with the fact that they are not very heavy layers when matured, practically bars this breed where egg production is the chief item.

There is no other breed of fowls that has the stately appearance possessed by the Brahma. These fowls are close feathered like the Langshans, but are larger and not so long-legged. They are not as heavily feathered as the Cochins. They are very graceful in appearance and carry themselves in a stately manner. The back on both male and female is very long and broad. There should be a slight rise of the back with a broad sweep at the base of the tail. The birds should be erect and well placed on their legs. Abundant toe feathers is also a very desirable feature.

Taking the American Standard of Perfection as a guide, the following are the special qualifications and disqualifications of the Light Brahma fowls, when being judged according to the Standard of Perfection.

Special qualifications are: Cocks over three pounds, cockerels over two and a half pounds, hens and pullets over two pounds less than standard weight. Vulture hocks also disqualify.

Light Brahma Hen, Owned by Missouri College of Agriculture.

Solid black feathers on the back; black spots in the web of feathers in the back, except stripes in the saddle on the males and at the base of the neck; or shanks other than yellow should disqualify Light Brahmas.

The neck plumage should be white. The hackle should be white, the web of the feathers should have a solid greenish black strip extending down the middle of each feather, running parallel with the edge of the feather and tapering to a point near the end. The under-color should be either white, bluish white or slate. In the wings, the wing bows should be white except near the front. The primaries and secondaries should be black with white on the lower side extending to the quill. The remainder of the primaries and secondaries should be black. In the back the surface color should be white except at the base of the neck. The saddle should be white, the under-color can be either white, bluish white or slate.

The tail should be black. The tail coverts should be black; the lesser coverts should be black edged with white. The surface and under-color of the breast should be white. The body and fluff should be white except under the wings, where it may be white, bluish white, or slate, the same as the under color.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

The man or woman that makes character makes foes.—Young.

The ideal life, the life full of completion haunts us all. We feel the thing we ought to be beating beneath the thing we are.

FOOD SUGGESTIONS.

A pressed meat which will be found appetizing for picnics or luncheons on hot days is prepared as follows: Boil together ½ pound of round steak and two large pork hocks. When done, mince the meat with a fork but do not put it through the meat chopper as it makes it pasty. Put into a mold and pour over it the liquor in which the meat was cooked.

Salmon With Tomatoes.—Prepare tomato cups by scalding the tomato, remove the skin, then hollow out the form cups, using a sharp teaspoon. Turn upside down to drain and place on ice to keep them firm. Fill with salmon and chopped celery with a good boiled dressing that is highly seasoned.

Prune and Rice Meringue.—Boil and drain one cupful of rice, then add two tablespoonfuls of butter, three of sugar, one well-beaten egg and one teaspoonful of ginger extract. Spread some of this mixture on a platter, cover it with a layer of stewed prunes; continue alternating the layers until all the rice is used. Sprinkle lightly with sugar, and cover with a meringue made of the whites of two eggs, one-half cupful of sugar, and brown in the oven. Serve cold, decorated with whole stewed prunes.

Apricot Tapioca Pudding.—Cover one and a half cupfuls of tapioca with cold water and let it soak for three hours; then drain and add three cupfuls of boiling water, one-half a teaspoonful of salt and one cupful of sugar; cook in a double boiler until transparent. Skin and stone twelve apricots, put them into the bottom of a buttered baking dish, pour over the tapioca mixture and bake in a moderate oven for 20 minutes. Serve hot or cold with sugar and cream.

Pickled Cherries.—Select sound large cherries and to every quart of cherries allow a cupful of the best cider vinegar, two cupfuls of sugar, one stick of cinnamon, broken in bits; a blade of mace and six whole cloves. Pit the cherries, pack them in jars and pour the boiling vinegar and spices over them. Cork and set away; they may be used almost immediately.

DEMAND FOR SHADE TREES

Massachusetts Journal Recognizes the Value of Proper Adornment of the City's Streets.

A real good hot summer day brings home to Bridgeport the shame of shadeless streets. In this case it is a burning shame, and no mistake. We wonder what administration will develop the foresight and public spirit to take the steps necessary at the present for the assuring of shade trees for the future?

Shade trees add to the value of property. They help to keep the city cool in summer. They conserve public health and comfort. They please the eye and are one of the greatest factors in the beautification of a city. People have an instinctive appreciation of trees—all the world knows that New Haven is a city of elms, and the most famous street in Germany is "Unter den Linden." Poets have rhapsodized over trees, and Handel wrote his famous "Largo" in celebration of a plain tree, which afforded grateful shade to the composer. And the practical advantages of trees are equal to the esthetic advantages. But it is unnecessary to cite these facts, because practically everybody agrees. What is needed is the taking of definite steps to assure shade trees in the future and to counteract the lack of such a provision in the past.—Bridgeport (Mass.) Telegram.

Wild Rose Hedge.

Wherever there is a wild rose hedge it should be retained and encouraged, if the blossoms are of a good shade. Otherwise one should try to get in a more pleasing variety. Wild roses differ enormously in their color tints, ranging all the way from very pale to a very deep and beautiful pink. Evidently there are a great many varieties among wild roses. There is a fixed belief that wild roses will not stand being picked. The writer one Sunday morning attended church in Minneapolis, where wild roses were twined in great profusion about the pillars and balconies of the church. They were there by the thousands and had been there for many hours. They retained their freshness throughout the day. The secret of their retaining freshness was that they had been gathered very early in the morning before sunrise and while covered with dew. Some varieties of wild roses seem to bloom till very late. The writer has picked wild roses as late as December, and in Cook county, too!

Councilwoman at Work.

A fight against the unsightly, unsanitary and value wrecking billboards of Los Angeles has been reopened by Estelle Lawton Lindsey, councilwoman of that city. Mrs. Lindsey announced recently that she would at once renew the fight to bar the billboards from the residence districts and would ask the council to pass the ordinance barring them. This measure provides that the consent of a majority of the property owners in the same block must be obtained before a billboard may be erected in a residence district. The Chicago ordinance was the model for this Los Angeles bill and the supreme court of Illinois upheld the measure in Chicago, but the billboard posters appealed to the Supreme court of the United States and the case is still pending.

Civic Co-operators.

Under the Chicago Industrial club's plan, 2,500 persons have enrolled as civic co-operators, giving practical aid in civic helpfulness. It is said that not one instance of overofficiousness or meddlesome interference has been noted since the plan was inaugurated.

When the Case Is Urgent.

Arbitration is usually most needed when somebody declares that there is nothing to arbitrate.—Washington Star.

VILLA IS GAINING

U. S. COMMISSION FINDS CARRANZA IS LOSING CONTROL IN CHIHUAHUA, MEX.

BORDER AGAIN IS MENACED

Joint Body Tables Question of Withdrawing Pershing's Troops From Republic—American and Mexican Troops May Restore Order.

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 13.—The American-Mexican joint commission, convening on Friday after a recess of a week, was confronted by a situation in Mexico which is only equaled in seriousness by that which existed after the Columbus raid and the dispatch of the expeditionary column after Villa under General Pershing.

Official and other reliable information in the hands of the American commissioners indicates that the state of Chihuahua, with the exception of a few of the larger cities, is beyond the control of the Carranza authorities and that the power of the opposition is increasing daily.

The legalistas, who have been passive in the southern part of Mexico, have now begun to show considerable strength and have captured important towns of Chiapas and Oaxaca.

The Mexican commissioners admitted the capture by the followers of Gen. Felix Diaz of the railway junction of Rincon Antonol, in Oaxaca. This gives the legalistas control over the most important railway south of Mexico City, with the railway material held at the junction of the Pan-American and Tehauntepec railways.

Much of this information was based on reports reaching the border through refugees and some was based on nothing more authentic than border rumor. All of it, however, indicated that the situation in Chihuahua was growing serious and that unless the Carranza commanders were able to show some definite gains against the Villistas soon, the control of that territory, with the consequent endangering of the American border towns, would pass out of the hands of Carranza.

The Mexican commissioners questioned the reliability of much of the information presented by the Americans, but admitted the main features. While no announcement has been made, it is known that the question of the withdrawal of the Pershing column has been tabled for the present and that it is not likely to be revived soon. It is considered likely that the question of more active co-operation between the American and Mexican forces to restore order may be considered.

ACCUSED BY GERMAN ENVOY

Letters Addressed to Wife of Von Bernstorff Cause Trouble for Armgaard Graves.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Armgaard Karl Graves, a professed former German and British spy, was arrested on Saturday at the home of Prince von Hatzfeldt-Trachenberg, in this city, charged with attempting to blackmail Countess von Bernstorff, wife of the German ambassador. A. Bruce Bielaski, chief of the bureau of investigation, stated that Graves had attempted to obtain $3,000 from Prince von Hatzfeldt, counselor of the German embassy, for the surrender of stolen letters addressed to Countess von Bernstorff. The letters, Mr. Bielaski asserted, were from a cousin of the countess in Germany, and the fact that they contained endearing terms probably moved Graves to believe they would embarrass her if made public. Mr. Bielaski asserted that Graves obtained the letters from one or more persons who had smuggled them past the British censor. His bail was fixed at $2,000 and was furnished by a professional bondsman. The letters addressed to the countess, he said, were from a woman well known in court circles in Berlin. They were not in code, but, according to Graves, were so worded as to convey secret information of a political nature to the ambassador.

TAKE THREE TOWNS

BRITISH ADVANCE ON FIVE-MILE FRONT ON ANCRE RIVER IN FRANCE.

PENETRATE LINES ONE MILE

Heavily Fortified Positions Held by Germans for Two Years Are Seized —Berlin Says Attacks Failed.

London, Nov. 15.—British troops in a new offensive north and south of the Ancre river have advanced north of the river to a maximum depth of one mile on a front of five miles, capturing from the Germans the towns of Beaumont, Hamel and St. Pierre-Divion, according to a dispatch by the correspondent of Reuter's Telegraph company at British headquarters. Fighting is still going on between the German and British troops around the town of Serre, about two miles north of Beaumont. Three thousand five hundred prisoners already have been taken by the British.

The Reuter dispatch says:

"We attacked early in the morning. Already the British line on both sides of the Ancre has been advanced for a depth of one mile on a point of five miles, capturing the villages of Beaumont and Hamel, considered by the Germans impregnable, also St. Pierre-Divion and valuable trenches north of Serre.

"All these positions were a part of the heavily fortified original German main line and had been occupied for more than two years.

"Many prisoners have been taken. Already 3,500 have been collected in the advanced cages. Fighting continues around Serre, the only place not captured in the first assault."

Berlin, Germany, (by wireless to Sayville, L. I.), Nov. 15.—Attempts of entente troops to advance between the Ancre and the Somme were broken up by German artillery fire, the war office announced on Monday.

In upper Alsace the French took the offensive, but their efforts to advance failed completely.

In the town of Sailly-Saillisel the German forces continue to hold the east edge of the town.

Wesley Allison, agent for General Hughes in the purchase of war munitions in the United States, had organized mushroom companies in the United States, secured orders for shells and shell fuses from the Canadian shell committee, through the aid of General Hughes, and had charged exorbitant prices for the shells and pocketed millions as a result.

The accident occurred at the Navy Proving grounds, situated on the Potomac river, 40 miles from Washington, at 2:45 o'clock in the afternoon.

U. S. STEAMER SUNK

GERMAN SUBMARINE SPARED STEAMER COLUMBIAN UNTIL VIOLENT STORM ENDED.

WANTED TO SAVE THE CREW

Commander of U-Boat That Torpedoed the Rowanmore Says Vessel Attempted to Escape After Being Warned—Americans Escape.

Paris, Nov. 14.—A wireless dispatch from Madrid tells how a German submarine waited two days before sinking the American steamship Columbian in order to save the crew.

According to this information, the Columbian encountered the submarine on November 6, in a violent tempest. The submarine compelled the Columbian to interrupt its voyage and lie to under surveillance until November 8. When the storm subsided, the dispatch says, the submarine ordered the crew to abandon the ship, and then sank it.

A Havas dispatch from Madrid quotes the newspapers of Corruna, Spain, where the crew is reported to have landed, to the effect that when the Columbian was held up the submarine ordered the crew to disembark, but that the storm was so severe this was impossible until two days later.

This dispatch also says the Norwegian steamships Balto and Fordalen were destroyed in the some manner on November 9. (A report on the sinking of these steamships was received from London).

Berlin, Nov. 14, via wireless.—The report of the commander of the German submarine which sank the British steamship Rowanmore, on which there were several Americans, has been received by the admiralty.

The report says the Rowanmore disregarded the submarine's signal to halt and endeavored to escape at full speed, making it necessary for the submarine to fire a few shots in order to bring it to.

The crew showed its opinion of the captain's course, the report says, by piling into the boats, leaving the master alone on the steamer. He was forced to lower a boat unaided and was paddling around alone when picked up by the submarine.

The Americans on board, as far as can be learned, consisted of several negro firemen.

No report has been received on the case of the British steamship Marina, which, with 52 Americans in the crew, was sunk by a submarine off the Irish coast.

TO AID PEACE AFTER WAR

Chancellor Hollweg Tells Reichstag Nation Will Co-Operate to Form International League.

Berlin, Nov. 11.—Germany, after the end of the war, will co-operate with other powers in seeking a practical means for obtaining an enduring world peace through an international tribunal, Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg told the reichstag's main committee.

The chancellor, discussing the influenece of the origin of the war on future peace, added: "Gentlemen, we have nothing to fear from any tribunal."

The chancellor replied to the speech made by Lord Grey, British foreign secretary, to foreign newspaper men, in which he said that the origin of the present war must influence peace conditions and that Germany would be entitled to ask for guaranties against future attacks if the present war really were forced upon Germany. Of course Lord Grey at once added that Germany's interpretation of the origin of the war was incorrect and that the war was not forced upon Germany, but was forced by Germany upon Europe.

UNOFFICIAL RETURNS SHOW PRESIDENT WILSON RE-ELECTED

Result So Close In Several States That Republicans Demand a Recount--Democrats May Not Have Working Majority In House of Representatives.

President,
WOODROW WILSON.
Vice President,
THOMAS R. MARSHALL.

New York, Nov. 11.—On the face of the unofficial returns, the above is the choice of the American people for chief executive officers of the nation for the next four years, but the result is so close in several states that Republican leaders are not willing to accept the verdict until a recount of the ballots has been made in these states.

The situation is extraordinary and has resulted in days of nerve-racking strain for the people of the country. If the election officials of a few remote precincts in a few states know how the nation has been waiting breathless to hear from them, they must be swelled up enormously with a sense of their importance. For on those few precincts has depended the nation's choice of its chief executive.

That Mr. Wilson's victory over Mr. Hughes will not be conceded without a recount in the close states, such as California, New Hampshire, New Mexico and North Dakota, was determined at conferences of the Republican leaders here. Chairman Willcox asserted a recount would be demanded wherever the margin of Democratic victory was so small that comparatively few votes would turn the scales. He and his associates say they take the position that there should be no cloud upon Mr. Wilson's title to the presidency. The Democrats, for their part, declared that there must be a recount in New Hampshire, even though the returns gave the state to Mr. Wilson.

That the returns are still incomplete is due to the presence on the border of the National Guard of a number of states. The soldiers are permitted to vote by mail, their ballots being forwarded to the auditors of their home counties, and in Minnesota especially the vote of the guardsmen is likely to cut a figure in determining whether the state goes into the Wilson or the Hughes column.

Minnesota was as bad as California in the matter of shifts, and as its delegation is nearly as large, it, too, was watched with the intensest interest. Through days and nights of counting, the race was a see-saw, with but a thousand or so of votes separating the candidates. Neither side would admit defeat, and even now both are awaiting the soldier vote and the official count.

New Hampshire a Surprise.

Perhaps the most surprising of all the states was New Hampshire. It alone of all New England failed to give the Republican candidate a substantial plurality, and for days no one knew in which column it would land. The astonishing closeness of the vote was shown by the rival claims, three days after the election, of 100 plurality for Hughes and 84 for Wilson. In the circumstances it is no wonder that the managers of both parties should demand a recount.

New Mexico, with three electoral votes, attracted national attention by placing itself early in the list of doubtful states, and as it soon appeared that almost every electoral vote would be vital, the returns from down on the border were grabbed hot off the wires. After veering back and forth for days, New Mexico was definitely placed in the Wilson column, though there, too, the president's margin was so scant that a basis was afforded for the call for a recount. A few mistakes discovered in the figures of the precinct officials might well swing the state over to Hughes.

Willcox Demands Recount.

On Friday National Chairman Willcox of the Republican party handed out the following statement:

"The result still depends upon the vote in a few close states. It must be borne in mind that the returns thus far announced are, in most states, unofficial, and may be changed by the official count required by the laws of those states.

"Twice during these unofficial compilations yesterday in California misplaces in additions were announced from that state, substantially changing figures previously given.

"It is a common experience that the result of the official count almost always varies from the returns first announced.

"Where the vote is as close as that reported in several states, it may well be that material changes will result from the official count.

"We owe it to the country to take all necessary steps to see that an exact and honest count of the vote is made. When the current seemed to be running against Mr. Wilson on Wednesday the Democratic managers announced their intention to demand a recount in every close state.

"All we desire is to make sure that the vote is counted as cast."

Both sides conceded that no matter what action might be taken in regard to a recount there was little likelihood of a contest being carried to the house of representatives as it was after the Hayes-Tilden campaign in 1876. Legislation enacted in 1887, it was said, made the state sovereign in pronouncing judgment in a recount of the presidential vote.

How Congress Stands.

With returns missing from only one congressional district in the United States, the Republicans and Democrats each had elected 215 representatives.

The vote in New Mexico, which is still in doubt, probably will determine which party is to have a plurality of one over the other. The present member from New Mexico is a Republican.

The balance of power in the next house will be held by four men, one a Progressive Protectionist from Louisiana, one an Independent from Massachusetts, one a Progressive from Minnesota and the other a Socialist from New York.

The action of these members apparently will determine the choice of a speaker, as well as the fate of legislation which is supported or opposed on purely party lines.

The senate remains unchanged, 54 Democrats to 42 Republicans; a Democratic majority of 12.

In addition to the hope of electing a congressman at large from New Mexico, the Democrats had one grain of comfort. It was that an official count may disclose that Thomas J. Scully has been re-elected from the third New Jersey district.

An unusual feature of the result is the election of the first woman to congress, Miss Jeannette Rankin, Republican, apparently having been elected in Montana.

Six States Go Dry.

Prohibitionists are jubilant over the results of the election where prohibition was an issue. From Washington the legislative committee of the Anti-Saloon league issued a statement, saying:

"Prohibition has taken another great leap forward. Michigan has voted for state-wide prohibition by 75,000 majority, Nebraska by 35,000, Montana by 20,000 and South Dakota by 25,000. Idaho has adopted a prohibition constitutional amendment by a majority of 3 to 1. Utah has probably elected a legislature pledged to enact state-wide prohibition. Washington, Iowa, Colorado, Arizona and Arkansas have defeated attempts of the liquor people to secure the adoption of proposals which would nullify their prohibitory laws.

"Thus 24 states out of 48—one-half of the states of the Union—have now declared for state-wide prohibition."

Women Vote as Do Men.

From the general result it is clear that as the men voted in the suffrage states, so did the women.

In Illinois men and women seemed about equally divided as to preference. The state went for Hughes by a big plurality.

In Kansas, Colorado, Montana, Washington, Oregon and California, where women also vote, Wilson was successful, but his pluralities were not sufficiently large to indicate that the woman voters supported him as a unit.

Farm Vote the Factor.

There are several great outstanding facts concerning the result of the election, one of which is that labor, in all the big industrial states except Ohio, declined to give its undivided support to President Wilson despite his claim to it on the score of having persuaded congress to pass the Adamson "eight-hour" bill. New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, Indiana, all gave the Republican candidate pluralities, and Ohio's vote in favor of Wilson is not certainly to be attributed to the labor vote.

Another interesting development was the independence of the West, which is asserting that it elected a president without the aid of New York and Pennsylvania and other big eastern and central states. When it was found, early in the evening of election day, that the empire state had gone for Hughes, the newspapers of the metropolis, even those that had supported Wilson, conceded the victory to the Republicans, without waiting to hear from the middle West. When the returns came in from these regions, it was found that the farmer and stock raiser had decided the election.

Yet another fact that calls for comment is that Governor Johnson of California, running on the Republican and Progressive tickets, has been elected to the United States senate by something like 300,000 plurality, and yet the state went Democratic on the presidency.

Epirus Cradle of Greece

GREECE was born amid the mountains of Epirus, if one may believe not only what Aristotle says but what modern investigations prove. It was this ancient philosopher who asserted that in Epirus dwelt the first Greeks, afterward called the Hellenes, and some French and Greek explorers have uncovered there the remains of the oldest oracle, the earliest temple and theater.

The Epirus district, without respect to its modern boundaries—Greek, and Albanian—is described in a bulletin issued by the National Geographic society.

In ancient times the name Epirus (mainland) was given to an extensive area of northwestern Greece to distinguish it from the islands of the Ionian sea, which form a fringe to the west. It extended from an indefinite northern boundary, somewhere in the southern part of the territory now embraced in the infant principality of Albania, to the Corinthian gulf, and although the Athenians, Corinthians and Spartans were wont to look upon the inhabitants of the district as semi-barbarous, no less an authority than Aristotle gave it as the original home of the Hellenes.

Owing to its extremely mountainous character, Epirus has never been a great grain-producing section, but from ancient times up to the present it has been famous for its fine cattle and horses, also for a peculiar breed of dogs, the Molossian. In the eastern part of the district towers Mount Lacmon, the backbone of the Pindus range, on which rise three of the great rivers of northwestern Greece.

Famed Oracle of Ancients.

Epirus became world-renowned even before historic times on account of the great oracle of Dodona, the ruins of whose temples were discovered during the last half of the nineteenth century only a few miles southwest of the modern Macedonian town of Janina. The messages from the gods were received at Dodona through the rustlings of the leaves of an oak tree in which Zeus was supposed to reside, but a local legend says that the first message was delivered by a dove speaking from the tree with a human voice. At any rate, the priestesses of the oracle were called Peleiades (doves). Herodotus reports that while on a visit to Egyptian Thebes he learned that the oracle had been founded by an Egyptian princess who had been spirited away by Phoenicians.

As the rivalry between the oracle of Zeus at Dodona and that of Apollo at Delphi grew more keen the priestesses of the former invented new methods of receiving messages, among these being the interpretation of the murmur of a bubbling fountain near the oak tree, the sound of the wind rushing through the brazen cauldrons which stood in a circle near the temple, and the sounds made by a metal-tipped whip as the wind drove it against a bronze tripod. Many Athenians, Spartans and eastern potentates consulted the oracle and it is said that Croesus, the last king of Lydia, also consulted Dodona as to whether he should attempt a campaign against Cyrus, king of the Persians. Unhappily the famous "rich man" acted upon the advice of the Delphic oracle which told him that "he would destroy a great kingdom." And the prediction of the oracle was verified, but the kingdom which he destroyed was his own.

The Hellenes founded many colonies on the Epiran shore and these served as stepping stones to dominion over the Adriatic. The wealthiest of the ancient cities was Phoenice, which became the head of an Epirotic league after the fall of the Molossian kingdom.

The Molossian Kingdom.

The Molossians, most powerful and progressive of the 14 tribes which inhabited Epirus, were ruled by chieftains who professed to be descendants of Pyrrhus, the son of Achilles, who was supposed to have settled in this part of the world after the fall of Troy.

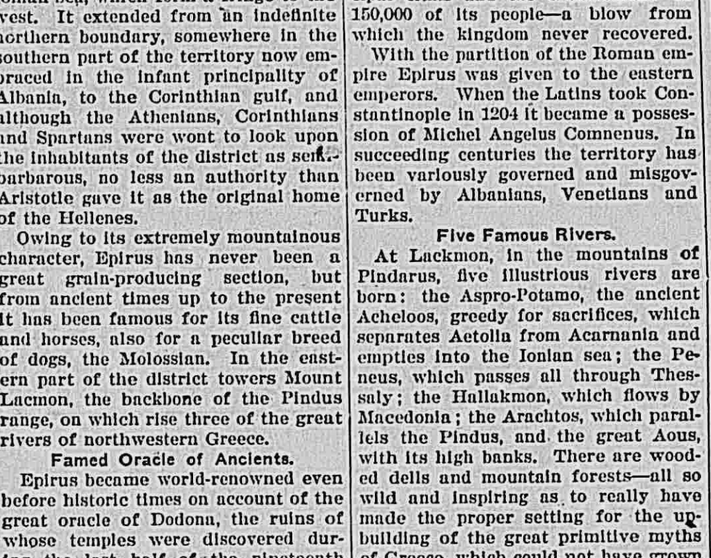

One of the most noted of the Molossian kings was Arymbas II, who gave his brother's daughters an excellent education, married one of them himself and gave the other, Olympias, to Philip II of Macedon. Olympias lives in history as the mother of Alexander the Great. From Alexander's aunt descended Pyrrhus, who waged a long war with Rome in behalf of the Tarentines and who made Epirus a power in world politics for a short time. More than 150 years after the death of Pyrrhus, Epirus again came in conflict with Rome as the ally of Perseus, the Macedonian who mounted a throne over the body of his murdered brother Demetrius. The Romans under Aemilius Paulus annihilated the forces of Perseus at Pydna (168 B. C.), and took the defeated king in triumph to the capital. The punishment meted out to Epirus for its share in the war was the destruction of 70 of its principal cities and the enslavement of 150,000 of its people—a blow from which the kingdom never recovered.

With the partition of the Roman empire Epirus was given to the eastern emperors. When the Latins took Constantinople in 1204 it became a possession of Michel Angelus Comnenus. In succeeding centuries the territory has been variously governed and misgoverned by Albanians, Venetians and Turks.

Five Famous Rivers.

At Lackmon, in the mountains of Pindarus, five illustrious rivers are born: the Aspro-Potamo, the ancient Acheloos, greedy for sacrifices, which separates Aetolia from Acarnania and empties into the Ionian sea; the Peneus, which passes all through Thessaly; the Hallakmon, which flows by Macedonia; the Arachtos, which parallels the Pindus, and the great Aous, with its high banks. There are wooded dells and mountain forests—all so wild and inspiring as to really have made the proper setting for the upbuilding of the great primitive myths of Greece, which could not have grown up anywhere else.

But the real treasures of the early days of Epirus are for the most part still held by the faithful earth. In

SCENE IN PARAMYTHIA

1912 it was impossible to visit this wild country save under heavy guard. At the very gates of Europe Epirus was less known, more shut off, than the Congo.

The French Consul Pouqueville hardly dared to go out of sight of his home, all barred with iron. Not a week passed that there was not a bloody murder on the highways. The Greek inspectors of schools founded by wealthy Epirotes took their lives in their hands when they came on their trips, which were kept secret. Travelers within the last few years had to be especially guarded if they would pass through alive.

On Discretion.

There is no talent so useful toward rising in the world, or which puts men more out of the reach of fortune than that quality generally possessed by the dullest sort of people, and is in common speech called discretion, a species of lower prudence, by the assistance of which people of the meanest intellectuals, without any other qualifications, pass through the world in great tranquillity, and with universal good treatment, neither giving nor taking offense. Courts are seldom unprovided of persons under this character, on whom, if they happen to be of great quality, most employments, even the greatest, naturally fall when competitors will not agree; and in such promotions nobody rejoices or grieves.—Jonathan Swift.

She Helped Him.

An Oklahoma young man devoted to the material affairs of life, separated himself from business to attend a reception one evening, in the course of which he was introduced to a pretty girl, felt the sting of admiration and set out to do his best for a favorable impression.

"I scarcely have a moment to play or read," said he, "nor to apply myself to the study of certain interesting problems. For instance, I am utterly ignorant as to how the incandescent light is produced."

"Why, that is very simple," the girl replied with a radiant smile. "You just turn a button."

EX-CONVICT ASKS TO BE SENT BACK

Gives Up Parole Because He Wearies of Scorn of Fellow Men.

Los Angeles.—Discouraged by his fruitless effort as an ex-convict to make good with the world, E. L. Hammond has decided to go back to the San Quentin prison at Los Angeles, Cal., to serve the remaining four months of a two-year sentence for forgery. He walked into the Los Angeles county jail a few days ago and surrendered his parole privilege. He said he couldn't live up to the requirements and wanted to give up the liberty granted him six months ago.

"Why am I going back?" he repeated to a man who asked him the reason for his unusual action. "Well, brother, some day when you haven't anything to do in particular, get up early, leave all your money at home, put on a cheap, hand-me-down suit, a dirty shirt and collar, and then start out with a three-days' growth of whiskers on your face to find a job.

"Go into business offices, factories, commercial houses, construction companies and stores. Tell the employers you are an honest ex-convict, just out of state's prison; that you have turned straight; that you want a job so you can hold up your head among your fellow men once more. Do this some morning, and see what happens. You will understand, then, why I am going back to the penitentiary.

"I have pride and education. Once I was respected in good society. But today I am a jail-bird. I tell you it hurts, especially when folks won't give me a chance to make good after I have paid in full for my mistake."

Under the California parole law a man must have a position in view before he can be released by prison authorities.

When his proffered job failed to materialize, Hammond joined his destitute father in Los Angeles, was taken down with appendicitis, and went to the county hospital. When he came out he was weak and unable to do heavy work. Worse yet, he was "broke." He didn't have the price of a shave. He didn't have the price of a clean collar. He didn't have the price of a meal. For some time he tried to fight a losing battle, but at last he gave up the struggle to make a living and asked the parole officer for a ticket back to San Quentin.

WOMAN HELPS PULL WAGON

When Sheriff's Men Rescue Her She Attacks Them With Ax to Free "Her Man."

Lincoln, Neb.—A woman hitched with a mule to a wagon and driving slowly down the road near the state prison, was picked up by Sheriff Hyers. She gave the name of Mrs. Hopkins, and said that her husband had been driving her as he would an animal.

The man denied the story in part and insisted that he had taken his turn in the harness beside the mule.

When the man entered the sheriff's automobile the woman attempted to beat the officers off with an ax, insisting that they should give up "her man."

DAIRY NOTES

To produce good milk, cows must be comfortable.

Calf raising is an important part of the dairyman's business.

Cleanliness and carefulness are the keystone in successful dairying.

The dairy barn should be roomy, clean, dry, light and well ventilated.

While feed is an important factor in successful dairying it is not the only thing.

Cannot expect calves to be better than their sire—that is why we need the best.

• • •

Always handle cows carefully. The cow will more than repay any kindness shown her.

After the calf is six weeks old there is little danger of it getting indigestion or scours.

• • •

It may save time to drive the cows to the barn at a trot, but it is a poor and ill-timed economy.

• • •

Keeping the calves separate also prevents the calves from sucking each other, a disagreeable habit.

Keep the calves separate for the first two months so that if anything goes wrong with them it will be immediately detected.

Speedy and Easy Riding

There's little comfort in most low priced cars. You can't use their speeds. They jostle you—they ride roughly—they don't hold the road.

The $635 Overland is different. It is not only the speediest of low priced cars—

But you can use the full speed of its powerful motor when you need it.

It has long 42-inch, easy riding, shock absorbing cantilever rear springs. In addition the 75 B Overland is a longer car—104-inch wheelbase. And it has 4-inch tires.

Its smoothness and ease of riding at any speed would do justice to a much larger and heavier car.

Come in and let us demonstrate. That's the best kind of proof.
